Oil Well In Frankfort Twp. Sunk On McGlashen Farm

Drilling for oil in Frankfort township was actually begun last Saturday on the McGlashen farm west of Harlem avenue and north of the McGlashen switch on the E. J. & E. railroad.

Mr. Hobbs is the driller in charge and has four men working on the job. They expect to be there all winter unless they should happen to strike oil sooner. There is much speculation now as to the prospect of oil being found in Frankfort township. Drilling work was somewhat delayed the forepart of the week when the pipe supply was exhausted. More pipe was ordered.

So far sixty oil leases have been secured covering ten thousand acres of land in Frankfort and Green Garden townships.

Texas World's Fair Visitor Loses Purse In Frankfort

Mrs. Florence Stephens, a pretty widow of Bullard, Texas, while enroute to the World's Fair, met with all kinds of ill luck when she arrived in this section Monday. She had arranged to meet her sister from Milwaukee at Frankfort, but the sister failed to appear.

Car trouble caused Mrs. Stephens to stop in Frankfort. She had her purse containing $50 in cash, keys, and bank books in her hand. She got out of the car and laid the purse on the bumper. After clearing up the car trouble she got back in the car and drove away forgetting about the purse. When she got to New Lenox she missed the purse and drove back to Frankfort but could find no trace of the purse. It is thought someone picked up the purse. Mrs. Stephens has an adv. in the Want Ad. TINLEY'S OLDEST RESIDENT PASSES 91ST BIRTHDAY

Fredrick Nielsen, the oldest resident in Tinley Park passed the 91st milestone in his long and interesting life Wednesday. The event was quietly celebrated by the immediate family.

When the editor called he found Mr. Nielsen playing the popular German card game "Schafkopf" with his sons Fredrick of Omaha, Nebraska, William Nielsen of Chicago and the latter's son-in-law, Paul Hickerson of Chicago.

Mr. Nielsen is in good health and said it was his aim to reach the century mark. He has a remarkable memory and even the weight of the years seem to rest lightly on him. He has a genial personality and is very interesting to meet. The interrupted game was soon forgotten as Mr. Nielsen told the editor of his settling in Tinley Park in 1865. To be exact Mr. Nielsen arrived in Tinley Park March 7, 1865. He engaged in the blacksmith trade and was the village smithy for many years. He related that there were only dirt roads in those days and that often times the horses legs would be so plastered with mud that they had to be washed off before the horses could be shod.

Mr. Nielsen is a deeply religious man and on the fly leaf of his German Bible is written the date he left the Fatherland to seek his fortune in the New World of America.

He sailed for America on April 9, 1863 on a sailing vessel and was seven weeks on the Atlantic. He landed in New York and shortly afterward came on to Chicago.

He was a husky young man and soon found work with truck gardeners who were engaged in raising onions at what was then called Englewood Junction and what is now Englewood. A short while later he entered the employ of the famous Peter Schuttler wagon factory in Chicago as a blacksmith.

After locating in Tinley Park, Mr. Nielsen joined the Bachelor Grove Lutheran Church in 1866 and is at present the oldest member of that congregation.

As a special token of respect he was presented with a special gift at the recent celebration of the 75th anniversary of that church.

Mr. Nielsen was the guest of honor at a dinner Wednesday evening with the members of his immediate family being present. The centerpiece consisted of a beautiful bouquet of flowers a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nielsen, and Mr. and Mrs. Anna Nielsen. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hickerson of Chicago and Postmaster and Mrs. Christ Andres of Tinley Park who live with Mr. Nielsen.

The venerable old gentleman received felicitations from his many friends and relatives together with their well wishes that he attain his 100th birthday.

Mr. Nielsen takes an active interest in the affairs of the day and of the world and is well posted on many topics.

Bandits Hold Up Spencer Grain Man

Three bandits unmasked and appearing to be between 30 and 35 years old terrorized Mr. and Mrs. Albert Minger of Spencer when they held them up in their home a week ago Sunday night and robbed them of over $200 in cash.

About 8:30 o'clock that evening there was a knock at the door and when Mrs. Minger opened the door the men said they had automobile trouble and wanted to call a garage. After being admitted into the house, they pulled their guns and one of the bandits said "This is a stickup."

They demanded that the couple hand over $1,000 which the bandits claimed was hid in the house. Mr. and Mrs. Minger denied having so much money on the place, but the bandits were not satisfied and began ransacking the rooms and found some money and then insisted that there was more money and then began to threaten the couple. They found some change in a sewing machine drawer. They remained for almost an hour during which time they harassed Mr. and Mrs. Minger with various threats but did not attempt to harm them.

They knocked live coals of fire out of a stove which burned a hole in a rug. The job had all the earmarks of being an inside job.

Mr. Minger had deposited a good sum of money in a bank the day before.

One of the bandits during the holdup said he had been taught to go straight, but after his mother had died he went bad.

The Will County Sheriff's office was notified the next morning but no trace has been found of the bandits.

Mr. Minger operates a coal yard and grain elevator at Spencer. He has a son, but the latter was not at home the night of the holdup.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

BUTCHER THE SHRIKE

"WHO is Butcher the Shrike?" asked Peter Rabbit.

"He's new to the Old Orchard," replied Skimmer, "and you probably haven't noticed him. I've often seen him in the South. There he is now, on the tip-top of that tree over yonder."

Peter and Johnny Chuck looked eagerly. They saw a bird who at first glance appeared not unlike Mocker the Mockingbird. He was dressed wholly in black, gray and white. When he turned his head they saw a black stripe across the side of his face and that the tip of his bill was hooked. These were enough to make them forget that otherwise he was like Mocker. While they were looking at him he flew down into the grass and picked up a grasshopper. Then for some distance he flew with a steady, even flight only a little above the ground, suddenly shooting up and returning to the perch where they had first seen him. There he ate the grasshopper and resumed his watch for something else to catch.

"He certainly has wonderful eyes," said Skimmer admiringly. "He must have seen that grasshopper way over there in the grasses before he started after it, for he flew straight down. He doesn't waste time and energy hunting aimlessly. He sits on a high perch and watches until he sees something he wants. Many times I've seen him sitting on top of a telegraph pole. I understand that Bully the English Sparrow has become terribly nervous since the arrival of Butcher. He is particularly fond of English sparrows. I presume it was one of Bully's children you saw in the thorn tree, Peter. For my part, I hope he'll frighten Bully into leaving the Old Orchard. It would be a good thing for the rest of us."

"But I don't understand why he fastens his victims on those long thorns," said Peter.

"For two reasons," replied Skimmer.

Do YOU Know—

That a jet black cat, riding the trucks of a crack Union Pacific passenger train from some point near Ogden, Utah to Chicago, won the distinction of being the world's first transcontinental cat. The distance covered was about 1,500 miles.

"When he catches more grasshoppers and insects than he can eat, he sticks them on those thorns so that later he may be sure of a good meal if it happens there are no more to be caught when he is hungry. Mice, sparrows, and things too big for him to swallow, he sticks on the thorns so that he can pull them to pieces more easily. You see, his feet and claws are not big enough to hold them while he tears them to pieces with his hooked bill."

"Does he kill many birds?" asked Peter.

"Not many," replied Skimmer, "and most of them are English sparrows. He is a good deal like Killy the Sparrow Hawk in this respect. Hello! Now what's happened?"

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN... The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I was riding in a trolley car yesterday. Sitting opposite me was a man reading a Texas newspaper. As he started off the car I saw a headline in his paper which read: "Well-Known Mexican Flees with $350,000." My curiosity is aroused, as I saw nothing in the New York papers about it. What do you know about it?

Truly yours,

NICK L. RIDE.

Answer: Don't believe it. Looks to me as if the Mexican government is trying to take the edge off the Florida boom and get the people to go to their country. It is true that Mexican "flees" are well-known, but I doubt if they have any money.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

There is a chap who lives next door to me and I absolutely know he is a bootlegger. He has a sign in front of his home which says he is a "Marine Attorney." Can you see any connection between the sign and what he does for a living?

Yours truly,

U. MAYNO.

Answer: My dear friend, I'm surprised at you. A "Marine Lawyer" is the same as a "bootlegger." A "Marine Lawyer" is a fellow who takes cases off ships.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Do you think traveling broadens one's mind? The reason I ask is, I have the opportunity to take a trip across the Atlantic and back again without getting off the ship. Do you think a trip of this kind will add any to my present knowledge.

Sincerely,

C. WEED.

Answer: If there is anything at all in a man, a fifteen-day trip on the ocean will bring it out.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

There is a man living next door to me who drinks heavily and is nearly always drunk. I don't drink at all, yet I have only one-half the friends he has. How do you account for that?

Yours truly,

T. TOTALER.

Answer: You say he is always drunk. That's the reason. He sees twice as many people as you do.

Russia in the World War

Pre-revolutionary Russia had the only national anthem which contained as its chief note a prayer for peace. Yet, writes F. G. Taylor, Jr., New York city, in Collier's Weekly, when the World war came, no country mobilized more quickly. In fact, enthusiasm ran so high in Petrograd that a prize of $100,000 was raised as an award for the Russian who set foot in Berlin.

The Romance of a Happy Marriage

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE romance of the "sheik," the glory

Of glamorous, mystic sands;
The allure of the unknown places,
The magic of foreign lands—
They can never approach the splendor
My Grandmother could recall!
The romance of a happy marriage
Is lovelier than all!

The romance of a "back street" lover,
The furtive, clandestine kind,
Could never be as satisfying

As love that I have in mind:
An affection that builds a future
As staunch as a granite wall!
The romance of a happy marriage
Is lovelier than all!

The romance that is only captured
In print or upon the screen
Is unreal when compared to unions
Of lovers that I have seen!
When two hearts are entwined together
No matter what may befall,
The romance of a happy marriage
Is lovelier than all!

Take two tablespoonfuls each of chopped parsley and celery, two tablespoonfuls of chopped chives, one tablespoonful of chopped watercress and one teaspoonful of tarragon leaves. A bit of the vinegar may be used if the leaves cannot be obtained. Place in a chopping bowl with two hard cooked egg yolks, a tablespoonful each of chopped pickle and capers. Remove and press through a colander, add one-half cupful of butter, beat sharply with a wooden spoon for five minutes. Place in a jar in a cool place.

Relics Found in Palestine

All that remains of an Egyptian town which flourished more than 3,000 years ago, on a site near the present city of Tel Aviv, Palestine, are a heart-shaped scarab, the sacred beetle of ancient Egypt, a fragment of an Egyptian seal used on a papyrus document and a few bronze and flint implements. The large stone scarab, which bears a hieroglyphic inscription of a passage from the "Book of the Dead," is the first of its kind to be found in Palestine. It was placed over the heart of a mummy and is believed to have come from the tomb of some Egyptian official.

Memories of the Wild

Never Closed to Dog

As his mistress strode through the long grass, Flush, the spaniel, leaped hither and thither, parting its green curtain. What a variety of smells interwoven in subtlest combination thrilled his nostrils: Strong smells of earth, sweet smells of flowers; nameless smells of leaf and bramble; sour smells as they crossed the road; pungent smells as they entered the bean fields.

But suddenly down the wind came tearing a smell sharper, stronger, more lacerating than any—a smell that ripped across his brain, stirring a thousand instincts, releasing a million memories—the smell of hare, the smell of fox. Off he flashed like a fish drawn in a rush through water further and further. He forgot his mistress; he forgot all humankind. He heard dark men cry, "Span! Span!" He heard whips crack. He raced; he rushed. At last he stopped bewildered; the incantation faded; very slowly, wagging his tail sheepishly he trotted quietly back across the fields to where Miss Mitford stood shouting, "Flush! Flush! Flush!" and waving her umbrella.—Virginia Woolf in the Atlantic Monthly.

SYNOPSIS

Prudence Schuyler comes from New York to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, whose health has been broken by tragedy. The second day on her farm Prue falls from the barn loft into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, who lives at High Ledges on the neighboring farm. There is at once a mutual attraction between the two. Rod decides to stay at his home that winter, "looking after the timber." But Prudence decides to maintain a cool attitude toward him. She suspects men since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife.

"I guess your uncle thought he'd spent enough on the old house for a start. If he had women folks, they would have struck for it. I've got everything electric from an ice-box to a sewing machine. Don't know that it gets me any more time, though." With difficulty she extricated herself from the chair. "I must be going. When's your brother coming, dearie?"

"Just as soon as I get the house in order. It won't be but a few days now. Do you think he will like it? David and I are all that are left of the family. Mother and Father died in my debutante year. He was so much older than I that he has taken their places. He has been everything to me—since I lost my sister. Oh, Mother Puffer, you think he will get well here, don't you?"

"Get well! Never knew anyone who once settled in this village to die of anything but old age. He'll be spry and dancing at your wedding before you have time to turn around."

"My wedding! I married!" Prudence coughed in the vain hope of counteracting the bitterness of her exclamation. "I hope Dave gets well long, long before that. Thanks heaps for everything, Mrs. Puffer. Good night! Come again soon!"

Prudence curled up in the wing-chair, confided to the fire:

"The long winter evenings! Seed catalogues for entertainment! Zowie!"

"Self-pity almost caught me that time. Ingrate! Wailing over prospective long evenings, when, within my first twenty-four hours here, an all-conquering lumberman has called, and I have been snatched from a messy accident by a rich playboy."

She re-lived that episode. Shivered. Her realization of the smash from which Rodney Gerard had saved her had ripped off the shell of indifference to men in which she had encased her heart. She had actually liked him! Would she be able to harden again? Already the heavenly beauty and freshness of the place she had inherited was making life seem thrillingly worthwhile. The great spaces seemed as full of life as had the city streets crowded with pushing, dawdling humanity.

"Supper's ready, Miss Prue."

Prudence joined the woman at the door. "I'm hungry; that's why I'm low in my mind, Macky. Didn't Mother Puffer say that life could be awful dark and dreary on an empty stomach?" She linked her arm in that of the woman. "She's a dear to bring us things, and a wonderful cook."

Jane Mack sniffed. "She may be a wonderful cook, but she's a terrible talker. She said to me, 'What makes Miss Prue so bitter about men—a pretty child like her? Did her city beau turn her down because she lost her money?'"

Prudence bit her lips to steady them, blinked hard. Since the warning tap on her brother's shoulder, little hot, salty springs seemed in constant commotion behind her eyes.

Mrs. Puffer's question about the city beau returned to Prue's mind as several hours later she unclasped the string of pearls before the mirror on the chintz dressing table. She looked at the lovely, gleaming things which dripped from her pink palm. Her sister's pearls! Lovely Julie's, who had married the son of a multi-millionaire, adoring him, believing in him. When after two years of marriage she had discovered his unfaithfulness—the treachery of her brother's wife—she had crumpled, her life had gone out like a candle, and with it the life of her baby. The tragedy had seemed to run back into the very roots of Prue's heart—if one's heart had roots—or the spring of her heart which threatened so often to bubble up in tears. It had killed the lovely shining belief she had had in people, taken the sunshine out of living.

Time had eased the ache, but it had not restored her faith. She had had men friends, but she had steeled herself against their protestations. There were plenty of safe, sane interests without staking her happiness on a man.

Men. The eyes of the girl in the glass narrowed a trifle. She had met two today. Mrs. Puffer had declared: "There's one or two smart Alecks in the village who'll do you, if they get the chance."

Prudence laid the pearls in their satin bed and snapped the case shut. She tapped the velvet lightly with a finger as she reflected aloud:

"One or two smart Alecks. I wonder—I wonder if Mrs. Puffer was warning me against one or both of my new acquaintances."

CHAPTER III

Prudence, perched on the top of a grain bin in the dusty, shadowy barn, dangled her feet in their white and brown sports shoes. She nibbled a straw as she thoughtfully regarded St. Puffer, who, seated on a milking stool opposite, gazed back at her with fatuous admiration.

"What sort of man is Len Calloway, Mr. St.?" He has called on one pretext or another every day since I took possession of this property. You don't have to tell me that he is a compelling person and good-looking. I know that. His eyes are too dark and flashing, too near-set; his chin a bit too assertive; his hair is getting perilously thin on top, isn't it? Is he the whoopee-doo lad of the village? Mother Puffer said that he was born in the red brick house. Has he always lived in this town?"

Puffer rubbed an unshaven cheek. "Grew up here. Went west 'bout two years ago after he'd met with a disappointment in love. Then his father died and he came back bursting with know-how and began contracting to cut timber. What's he been saying to you?"

"He wants to buy the trees on the upper wood lot—the one Uncle Austin bought of his father. He didn't make a definite offer. He asked me to sign a contract giving him the right to cut all trees over ten inches and all wood necessary to get it out. Of course, I don't know anything about the business, but when he added that last clause the imp who regulates traffic in my mind flashed on a red light."

Puffer chortled. "You sure have your own way of saying things, Miss Prue. I guess that imp was on his job. Mind, I don't say Len would set out to cheat you, but he isn't in business for his health alone, and if you crossed him—well, don't have nothing to do with him. Then you're sure. If you like him, that's your business. All I'll say is, handsome is as handsome does. Hulloa, here's Rod! Wonder if he wants to buy timber?"

He waved his hand to Rodney Gerard, who, with a spectacular flourish and fanfare of French horn, stopped his car in front of the barn. "Greetings, Prue of Prosperity farm! Morning, St. Come for a ride, will you? It's a whale of a day." His eyes were on the girl.

"Terrible sorry I can't go, Roddy, but I've got to work on them poultry houses. My boss is all-fired fussy." Puffer chuckled and vanished round a corner.

Prudence took possession of the stool her man-of-all-work had vacated. She shook her head as she answered the question in Gerard's eyes. "If that invitation was meant for me, I can't go. I'm busy. The hens are approaching the season of diminishing returns—to put it conservatively. 'High yields and large profits' must be my battle-cry. Ever heard of an economic graph? Mr. St. and I have been tracing one. You seem to forget that I am a woman of affairs. I can't waste time playing with idle little boys like you."

"All right, I'm an idle little boy. Why should I work? I don't need money; I put the best I've got into any sport I make a stab at; I like a good time and—there you are."

Prudence rested her elbows on her knees, her chin in her palms, and studied Rodney Gerard curiously from under a fringe of lashes. His clean-cut face—she reluctantly conceded that it had an underlying strength—was care-free, debonaire. Her memory flashed a close-up of Len Calloway. She compared the two. Rodney Gerard was as tall as the lumberman. He gave an impression of lithe strength where the other man was massive.

"What's happened to your ambition? Arrested development? Don't you care to accomplish things?" she asked gravely.

"Some things. Do you?"

"Adore it. I love trying to do what I have to do superlatively well. I made good as a craftsman."

"What sort of craftsman?"

"Silver and gold. When people began to sneak cautiously from their financial crash-proof dugouts, began to unhoard, I earned a fairly good income making jewelry and silver boxes. Then the back-to-the-land urge caught us, turned me into a farmer—and here I am."

"Giving up your craft?"

"Not if I can possibly squeeze in time for it. I adore it. From now on I shall be an extremely busy person; Mother Puffer is about to instruct me in the thrifty art of canning. You, doubtless, will soon return to that gay circle of society in which you must be a bright and shining light."

She hadn't known that blue eyes could be flamingly black, nor that a fair skin could turn so darkly red.

"You've got that wrong. I'm an extremely busy person, too."

"You! Busy? About what?"

"Taking a medical correspondence course."

"What kind of medicine?"

"Don't look so skeptical. Perhaps it isn't medical, perhaps it's surgical. Trying to learn the remedy for hardening of the heart." There was a hint of seriousness underlying the light words. He regarded her steadily. "May be able to arrest the ossifying of yours. Is it true, as Mrs. Puffer intimates, that there's a white-haired boy in your New York stag line who's yearning to smash this farm obsession and carry you back to the city?"

Surprise hobbled Prue's voice. "W-what?"

"You know what I said. Don't side-step."

Indignation clarified her mind and loosened her tongue.

"Side-step! Why should I? There is, there was a man for whom I might have cared, but—you have brought this on yourself by your question—he is of your type; wealth is an acid test few of the men I have known could stand—so I'm a perfectly safe person so far as you are concerned. Mr. St."

"I Can't Waste Time Playing With Idle Little Boys Like You."

told me that you were in terror for fear some girl would marry you for your money. I wouldn't marry a rich playboy if I loved him to distraction. I had to stand by helpless while my sister broke her heart over one of them."

Rodney Gerard caught her hands and pulled her to her feet.

"St. talks too much. I in terror about anything? That's his joke. Your heart wouldn't break for a man, would it?"

"Prudence twisted free. "Not unless it split from fury because I had been so dumb as to believe in him."

"That's one in the eye for me, I take it. Boy, but you're bitter! I'm not in that class you detest. I'll make you take back what you said about my being of that type. I'll make you. It will be a no-quarter battle. Get me?"

She clasped her hands behind her back, leaned toward him smiling.

"Smashing climax. This is where a movie director who knew his business would shout 'Cut!'"

His eyes held her mocking eyes with steady inflexibility. "St. Puffer says that you are 'smart as a steel trap.' You may be, but apparently not smart enough to distinguish between the real and melodrama. I may be a lazy devil wasting opportunity, but I still believe in character, believe that there are levels below which—well, in the century in which you belong they called it noblesse oblige."

His face was colorless as he turned away to his car. Prue's conscience smarted. Had she been unjust? She couldn't help liking him. She was beside him as he stepped into the roadster. She smiled apology.

"Don't go away angry. You asked a question. I answered it. Just because we live on different planets of ideals and ideas is no reason for our quarrelling, is it?"

"How do you know we are so far apart?"

"Help! I've said the wrong thing again! I would love to motor with you, really I would, but David is coming on the afternoon train and I have heaps to do before then. You don't know how you tempt me."

There was a reckless light in Gerard's eyes.

"Quote. 'Fly pleasure and it will follow you.'"

"Then I won't fly. Will you take me to the Puffers?"

He swung the roadster door wide. Grinned engagingly.

"Taxi, lady?"

As the car shot forward, he inquired: "Who will bring your brother from the station?"

"Mr. St. I have been too busy about the place to try out the car 'Uncle Austin left me.'"

"The road is still torn up. He would be jolted to pulp in that old machine of Puffer's. If you think a 'rich playboy' may be trusted, I will meet him."

"Don't be snippy. I have been dreading the trip for David, but if he could come in this wonderful roadster—he is so—so precious." Emotion broke up the sentence, menaced her voice.

"I will accept your kindness only if you'll promise to come in and have tea when you bring David home."

There was a small-boy radiance in his face and voice which contracted Prue's throat.

"Mean it? Then of course I'll come. I'll drive this car as if it were a bubble with a grain of radium for passenger. Those are the most breakable and precious commodities I know. How are you, Calloway?"

The dark-eyed, dark-skinned man, passing, brought his red car to a sudden stop and swept off his broad-brimmed hat.

"Good morning, Miss Schuyler. I've just been to your place, Gerard. They told me I was likely to find you somewhere round here."

There was nothing in the words which could be challenged. It was the implication, Rodney Gerard reddened.

"Come to High Ledges tonight, Calloway, and I'll let you know what I have decided about the timber."

"Can't you tell me now?"

"No, I can't."

"Perhaps Miss Schuyler will say whether she has decided to let me have hers—or do you decide for her?"

"You're mighty impertinent," Gerard flared, and shot the car forward.

"Oh dear! Have you made an enemy because of me?"

His laugh was curt. "The enmity between Len Calloway and yours truly is nothing new. He always gets my goat. Do you intend to sell your timber to him?"

"Mr. St. advises against it."

"Give me the contract to handle it, will you?"

"You?"

"Even I. Don't let surprise that I am interested in something besides sports shock you into insensibility. I have about a thousand acres of timber which have been on my mind for some time. I've decided to cut it this winter, and the more I have to cut, the better and more profitable job I can make of it."

"But—you'll have to live here!"

"All right. I'll have to live here. What a profound observation! Coming from a woman of affairs like yourself, it's a smash."

She stole a glance at his grave face. Her thoughts raced as swiftly as the fleecy clouds against the glaring blue sky. Had he had this in mind while she had been accusing him of indolence and indifference? Contrition warmed her voice.

"I should love to have you cut our timber, but, I warn you, I'm likely to be a pest I shall ask so many questions."

"Fire away. What say to forming a partnership?"

"Sounds grand—but that would take capital, wouldn't it? Why not sign a contract to the effect that the interest on your investment is to be paid before the profit is divided?"

"Hooley! I—"

"Unless that is done I'm off the partnership, Mr. Rodney Gerard."

"Oh, all right. I'm a lawyer—though I haven't done much at it. I'll draw a contract which will put skids under your fortune if you break it. Here we are at the Puffers'. Come on a little way. We have so much to decide, we are in business now, remember. We'll trace that economic graph you're so keen about."

Prudence swung open the door of the car. "Don't wheedle. I'll expect you for tea this afternoon. 'Morning, partner."

Emerald Said to Promote Friendship, Conquer Sin

The emerald is regarded as an emblem of success in love. Its green color is said to promote friendship and constancy of mind, while other authorities attribute to it the meaning of immortality and conquering of sin, writes an authority in the Kansas City Star.

Even in the days of Pliny this stone was highly esteemed; he wrote of emeralds: "Neither dim nor shade, nor yet the light of a candle, causes them to lose their luster."

The fresh color of emerald was supposed to be good for the eyes (bearing out modern optical opinion on the restful qualities of green), Pliny says. "There is not a gem or precious stone that so fully possesseth the eye, and yet never contenteth it with satiety. Nay, if the sight hath been wearied and dimmed by intensive poring upon anything else, the beholding of this stone doth refresh and restore it again."

The finest emeralds in the rich velvet and grass green color come from the South American republic of Colombia, the lighter green emeralds from Takawaja, Asiatic Russia, and New South Wales. Among poetical references are the lovely lines from Coleridge:

"I mark the glow-worm, as I pass,
Move with 'green radiance' through the grass.
An emerald of light."

NOT AGREED ON "PROLETARIAT"

Varying Definitions of Term Long in Use.

Recent political disturbances throughout the world bring up the question: What is the proletariat?

The dictionary gives two conceptions of the term "proletariat." In earlier usage, the word designated the indigent classes collectively of a community or of a state, including day laborers and all other persons without capital or assured means of support. In modern Socialism, the term refers to the wage workers of a state or of the world, collectively, regarded as the producers of capital and creators of wealth; the laboring classes; the workingmen. This last meaning of the term probably arose during the French revolution.

The word is derived from the Latin proletariat, which referred to the body of citizens who were without means and belonged to the fifth property class. They were exempt from military service and served the state by contributing to it their children (proles, offspring). It is believed that this class received its name in the time of Servius Tullius.

Karl Marx was probably largely responsible for the popular use of the word proletariat. In the Communist Manifesto of 1847, by Marx and Engels, the Socialist conception of the term, as opposed to the bourgeoisie, is clearly brought out. Under the heading "Bourgeoisie and Proletariat," the following definitions are given:

"By bourgeoisie is meant the class of modern capitalists, owners of the means of social production and employers of wage-labor; by proletariat, the class of modern wage-laborers who, having no means of production of their own, are reduced to selling their labor-power in order to live."

The notion of class warfare is explained in Engels' preface to the Manifesto in which he says:

"The whole history of mankind (since the dissolution of primitive tribal society, holding land in common ownership) has been a history of class struggles, contests between exploiting and exploited, ruling and oppressed classes. . . . A stage has been reached where the oppressed and exploited class—the proletariat—cannot attain its emancipation from the sway of the exploiting and ruling class—the bourgeoisie—without at the same time, and once for all, emancipating socety at large from all exploitation, oppression, class distinction and class struggle."

These theories of Marx and Engels were brought to fullest realization by Lenin and the Bolsheviks, and their division of all persons into two distinct classes, the "workers of the world" and their "oppressors,"—New York Times.

In the Bermudas

Bermuda is a group of islands in the North Atlantic, 600 miles southeast of New York. Although said to be 365 in number, of which about a score are inhabited, they occupy a space only 18 by 2½ miles. The largest has an area of 9,000 acres, and the whole group contains 12,000 acres.

Age 13

Old enough for strong drugs?

It is not wise to give a laxative of adult strength to a child, just because you give it less often or in less amounts.

Stomach upsets and bowel troubles of growing children can often be traced to this single mistake.

There is a better way to relieve those occasional sluggish spells or constipation in a child of any age.

Use a liquid laxative containing senna (a natural laxative). California Syrup of Figs has the right amount for children's use, and this rich, fruity syrup does not harm or upset a child's system.

Doctors advise liquid laxatives, and hospitals use the liquid form. Almost any child who has been convalescing in the hospital usually comes out with bowels working like a well-regulated watch.

Make the change now to pure, California Syrup of Figs instead of harsh medicines, you won't risk any more violence to your child's appetite, digestion, and general physical condition. Those little upsets and complaints just disappear as a rule and the child is soon normal and happy again.

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

The Voice of the American Legion

By The Tinley Park Post No. 615

DO YOU REMEMBER

Remember those months after April, '17, when many of us were broomstick infantry, log artillery, and saw-horse cavalry? For a while America marching to war looked like a parade of the ooden soldiers.

How the Allies held the line and furnished us the arms we lacked at first—how by efforts extraordinary, but necessarily confused and extravagant, we at length made ready—how the Atlantic Ocean was a bottleneck which further retarded the flow of essential equipment to our men in the trenches—that is history. Our troops finally went into battle well trained and equipped. Too much time, that essence of victory, had not been lost, and we helped to win the war.

The point is, did we learn anything from an experience which might easily have been far more bitter than it was? Has a lesson, vainly taught by all our previous wars, been taken to heart at last? That is a question which any veteran, in view of the possibility of a future conflict, must ask for himself or his sons.

The answer is yes. We have learned and we have acted and are acting on our knowledge. The result is our plans for industrial mobilization and procurement of supplies in war.

To the popular mind preparedness has usually meant the maintenance of military forces and their readiness for employment in the field of battle. But the World War demonstrated that whole nations, and not armies and navies alone, wage wars. Hence, preparedness today means not only the maintenance of adequate armed forces, but also the readiness of the nation to support those armed forces with every resource at its command. Thus preparedness for war has come to include military preparation and economic preparation. Along with the plans for mobilization and training of the nation's manpower, there must be plans for the orderly procurement of the supplies needed by the armed forces and for the mobilization of industry so as to insure the production of those supplies in the time and quantities required. War procurement is a direct responsibility of the War Department, while industrial mobilization, which envisages governmental supervision and co-ordination of industry, labor, capital, transportation, raw materials, and other elements of our economic structure, is a responsibility of the President acting through such special civilian agencies as he and Congress may establish.

EMPLOYMENT FOR REHABILITATED VETERANS

The problem of the rehabilitation of U. S. war veterans who have received all the benefits that the Veterans Administration Facilities have to offer in the way of medical treatment and other restorative methods, and are completely recovered, is one on which little progress has been made in recent years.

It is obvious that a veteran, even one receiving compensation of twenty to thirty dollars a month, cannot leave a hospital with any assurance of becoming self-supporting.

Something should be done to overcome the misunderstanding existing at present among employers regarding the ability of recovered veterans to perform useful labor, and more opportunity should be provided for these men in hospitals to properly contact prospective employers.

The veteran writes hopefully to his former business friends and associates who send their regrets because they believe that the man's hospitalization is an indication of mental or physical instability. He finally gets into a mental rut of resignation and drifts on in government institutions.

Make no mistake, these men who have received treatment and are recovered, under the guidance of the Facilities' medical staffs are equal in skill and ability to any other cosmopolitan group of persons.

Out of the Fountain of Youth

FOOD SHOULD SUPPLY ALL BODY REQUISITES

JUST lately there has been brought to notice the fact that even though we get enough to eat, we are in reality starving some parts of our bodies because we are not getting the right kind of food or not enough of the right kind.

Everyone—old, young, or in-between—needs quantities of Vitamins A, B, C, D, and G, minerals such as calcium and phosphorus, proteins, some carbohydrates and some fats if good health is to be maintained. Just as an automobile will not run properly if it does not have enough gasoline, or oil, or water, or air in the tires, our bodies will not function at maximum efficiency if some one part is lacking in its food supply.

Occasionally some one will be heard to remark that regardless of how much he eats he cannot gain the weight he desires, or regardless of how much dieting he does he cannot lose excess weight. In such cases, it is frequently not a matter of how much or how little he eats, but rather of WHAT he eats.

Using as a basis the "Big Three" of balanced diets—milk, fruits, and vegetables—menus for reducing, gaining, or maintaining normal weight may easily be planned. By following such a diet, not only will the appetite be appeased but all nutritional elements necessary will be supplied.

Uni. Art Exhibit on Tour

A traveling exhibit of paintings, done by members of the University of Illinois art department, "toured" several of the larger down state cities during the year.

Civil art organizations where the exhibit was shown financed the tour. Fifty-nine paintings, many of them nationally known, were shown.

"The College of Fine and Applied Arts has for years had an increasing number of requests to do this sort of thing," Dean Rexford Newcomb explained. "The University has never been able to finance such a tour. We were therefore more than willing to co-operate when art lovers in these communities offered to pay all expenses."

George Nixon

Outlines Duties

George F. Nixon, Republican candidate for President and Member of the Board of County Commissioners, has prepared an analysis of the duties and responsibilities of the office which he seeks at the polls next November 6th. Among the important points which Mr. Nixon drives home are these:

"You are stockholders, everyone of you, in the largest corporation of its kind in the world - the Board of Commissioners of Cook County. The directors whom you select at the approaching election will spend during the tenure of their office in excess of one-hundred millions of dollars of your money.

"The man you select for the job of President is going to have the power of appointment over many other important positions - the proper and efficient conduct of which means more and more to you, the taxpayers, in these times of stress and trial. The President of the County Board, with the approval of his associates, names the head of all the institutions and departments under the Board's jurisdiction. He can veto any measure passed by the Board, even the appropriation bills."

Regarding his platform, Mr. Nixon continues:

"My gospel is a 1% tax limitation on all homes, real estate and property in Cook County; which means that if you own a home or property worth $3000, the taxes should never be more than $30. With the other taxes that come in and the whole sum properly and honestly administered, this is all that you, the burden carriers, should be called upon to pay.

"When elected I shall bring business principles and economy into what heretofore has been a happy hunting ground for tax squanderers. For 28 years - I went to work when I was 14 years old - I have toiled in Chicago. For two and a half years I have been a member of the Board of Tax Appeals. While in that office I have ordered a 15% cut in assessed values on all homes, two and three flat buildings; have led the fight for reduced 1932 taxes, resulting in lower current tax bills; have recently secured in County Court tax reductions for all property owners, amounting to from 3 per cent and 9 per cent because of illegal rates."

EXHIBITS AT TWO FAIRS SHOW 57-YEAR CONTRAST

In 1876, at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, the telephone was first exhibited to the public. At that time only a few telephones had been manufactured, there were no telephone exchanges, and telephones had not been placed on the market commercially. Demonstration equipment at the Fair consisted of two instruments connected by a short length of wire.

In 1933, at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, the demonstration of long distance service was one of the major features of the Bell System exhibit. Not only has telephone service become nationwide, but it is now international in its scope, with 92 per cent of the world's telephones within voice range of this country.

Whereas in 1876 it was possible to converse only a short distance, now, in 1933 it is possible to communicate by telephone with most of the countries in Europe, with South America, with Australia, with some of the countries of Asia, and with a number of important islands.

DOG'S BITE WORSE THAN HIS BARK—FOR TELEPHONE POLE

Automobiles and certain kinds of bugs are not the only menace to the life of a telephone pole. From down in Maine comes a story of a dog whose bite recently ruined five telephone poles in that State. This particular canine seems to have had a predilection for gouging holes in telephone poles, making deep cavities and other marks near the ground and even up as high as a man's chin. A telephone repairman, sent to investigate the trouble, reported that the animal was accustomed to place his ear to a pole, and after listening to the hum of the wires, begin an assault on the poles that eventually weakened them so that they had to be replaced. Finally the pole bases were screened to prevent further depredations on the part of this particular dog.

Facts About the Telephone

Ten years ago—on December 6, 1923—telephone wires made possible the first broadcasting of a presidential message to Congress.

Another submarine telephone cable has been laid across the English Channel. It connects England and the Continent at St. Margaret's Bay, Dover, and Calais, France.

The number of owners of American Telephone and Telegraph Company stock equals the combined population of Nashville, Dallas and Atlanta, or of Denver, Akron and Salt Lake City.

Can You Prove Your Oil is Better than the Others?

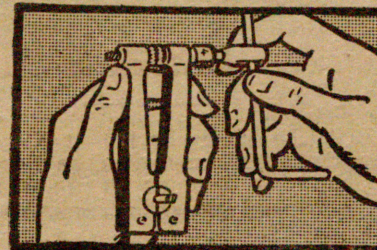

We Can and Do!

This Machine Shows Why this New Oil Cuts Motor Wear and Saves You Money!

YOU, as a buyer of Motor Oil, should ask that question—and demand facts! Here is Continental's answer:

In the demonstration pictured below, the film strength and oiliness of every well known motor oil in America have been shown to be increased by the addition of a drop of Germ Essence.

Demonstrations before at least two hundred thousand motor-minded men have proved that "Any oil would be better oil if Germ Processed!" But there is only one oil made by the patented Germ Process—New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil! Use this oil of proved strength in your car! It saves you money by giving greater motor protection and lower oil consumption. It gives you the comfortable feeling that you know your car is protected by the safest, finest motor oil made!

Assembled instrument. Split bearings and shaft, lubricated with competitive oil, are clamped between "jaws" of instrument. With set-screw, extreme pressure is applied.

Crank is now used to turn shaft. Oil film ruptures and bearings "seize." Shaft extremely hard to turn. You can even hear the metal-to-metal contact!

Drop of Germ Essence is added to oil in bearing. Same pressure applied. Shaft can now be turned easily. Smooth, quiet movement—no seizing—no sound. Proof that Germ Processing increases oiliness and film strength of any oil!

TO CAR OWNERS OF Mokena

Continental backs claims with facts. To prove that new and improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil gives you lower oil consumption as well as greater motor protection, we drove six brand new cars to destruction, testing this oil against five other nationally known oils. Any Conoco station will give you a booklet that tells the story of this convincing test. It will pay you in money saved to read it. Drive in and ask for a copy—or try this oil!

Will County Democrats Hold Rousing Rally

Throngs that filled the ball room in the Chamber of Commerce building last Wednesday night heard the Democratic State Candidates answer the campaign critics and review the achievements of the Roosevelt administration.

The meeting was preceded by a banquet served in the dining room of the Joliet Hotel. The state candidates including John Stelle, John A. Wieland, Martin A. Brennan and Michael L. Igoe were the guests of the local county candidates who also acted as hosts to the members of the Democratic Central Committee of Will County. The honorable Thos. F. Donovan, Lt. Governor was chairman of the banquet meeting. The Lt. Governor joined with Mr. Stelle, Mr. Igoe and others in stressing the need of organization. A torch light procession enlivened by music from two sound trucks escorted the candidates to the Chamber of Commerce ballroom where the Honorable Edwin L. Wilson, chairman of the Democratic Central Committee presided. The Will County candidates including George N. Blatt, Wm. E. Austin, Henry Koerner, Frank Tushek, Conrad J. Wirth, Michael J. Breen, Earl Francis Booth were present. John A. Zelko candidate for County Surveyor was not present.

James A. Howell, candidate for Congress from the 11th district was the first speaker on the program. He briefly reviewed the position in the campaign and presented a brief analysis of the questions that must be considered by voters who cast their ballot November 6th.

Mr. Stelle spoke briefly but vigorously concerning the developments of the campaign declaring: "The state ticket will be elected. We have campaigned in eighty counties in the state of Illinois and I make this prediction in possession of knowledge gained through personal contact with the people."

Mr. Brennan spoke with all the emphasis at his command, answered the opposition critics who complained that the integrity of the constitution has been impaired by the new deal legislation. He pointed out the relation of the various federal agencies to the people, stressing what he described "as the courageous act of a sane, sympathetic and progressive government that saved millions from eviction, millions from starvation, and millions of dollars for the business man."

Both Mr. Brennan and Mr. Stelle eulogized J. V. McCarthy, candidate for State Senator and paid appropriate compliments to the Chairwoman of the Democratic Women's Organization, Mrs. J. V. McCarthy. Both men, as did Mr. Igoe, later in the program spoke for the county candidates, urging a complete democratic victory which they said would be construed as a vote of confidence for President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Michael F. Henneberry, candidate for re-election to the House of Representatives, was host to Mr. Igoe after the meeting.

NEW DEAL NOTES

Convincing proof of the economic improvement in this country was found in an Associated Press dispatch from Washington last week, which told how the income of the United States government was 271 million dollars ahead of 1933. The largest part of this increase was from the income tax receipts, indicating that the income of the people at large was much higher.

Illinois farmers can thank Governor Henry Horner for looking after their interests. He co-operated with the federal government in obtaining $30,600,000 in corn loans; established a State wide farm debt adjustment program through which more than 3,000 farm homes were saved from foreclosure; expedited distribution of $38,000,000 under corn-hog contracts for farmers, and aided 40,000 soybean growers of the State by specifying soybean oil in paints purchased for the use of the State.

Qualified Men

The Democratic State ticket this fall is composed of men who are qualified for the positions they seek. John Stelle, candidate for State Treasurer, served two years as assistant State Treasurer and has served nearly two years as assistant State Auditor. Because of this service, he is thoroughly familiar with the Treasurer's office and will be able to administer it ably.

John A. Wieland, candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, is a trained educator. He has taught in almost every kind of school and is the author of several books on education.

Martin A. Brennan and Michael L. Igoe, candidates for Congressmen-at-Large, are both men of long legislative experience. Mr. Brennan has served one term in congress and was also a member of the State legislature of Illinois. Mr. Igoe served for 16 years in the Illinois legislature and was minority leader of that body.

Four candidates who are better qualified would be hard to find.

A comparison of conditions in 25 leading industries reporting to the National Industrial Conference Board for August "Shows that 5.2 per cent more persons were employed whose earnings per hour averaged 16.0 per cent higher and whose earnings per week averaged 1.3 per cent higher than a year ago. Total payroll disbursements were 6.4 per cent larger in August of this year than in the same month last year."

The Democratic administration under the leadership of President Roosevelt has refinanced 506,000 farms, thus saving one-half million farm homes.

The Constitution

Bruce A. Campbell, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, says in his speeches:

"The Constitution, for which the Democratic Party has always fought and always will fight, does not need defense by any group of repudiated Republicans. The Constitution has not been violated one bit by the Roosevelt administration. The United States Supreme Court, every member of which, with the exception of two, was appointed under Republican administrations, has not declared unconstitutional one single, solitary measure enacted by the last Congress and sponsored by the Roosevelt administration."

"The Constitution is merely being used by our political enemies to hide behind."

"Every progressive, liberal, humanitarian law ever proposed has had to face the cry of 'unconstitutionality'. It is the same old crew that always raises this cry—the crew of reactionaries who always put property rights above human rights."

Figures on the poll conducted among Illinois farmers as to whether or not they favor continuation of the corn-hog adjustment programs next year show that the farmers voted 2 to 1 in favor of the continuation of these programs.

Protection of policy holders as well as agents is the aim of Governor Henry Horner in his insistence that the insurance code of Illinois be revised, and a new code will be presented to the General Assembly in January for approval. A legislative commission is assisting the State Department of Insurance, Ernest Palmer, director, in drafting the code, and advice is being given by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, University of Illinois experts and the Illinois State Bar association. Under the plan, obsolete laws will be deleted and the statutes strengthened.

The so-called Republican leaders in Illinois, realizing the hopelessness of their campaign here, have now imported Hamilton Fish from New York to help them out. Mr. Fish, it will be remembered, was one of Mr. Hoover's closest advisers. Mr. Knox, a Chicago newspaper publisher, who was another close associate of Mr. Hoover, is also to be one of their big speaking guns. Mr. Knox went down to Maine to help them out and made a rousing Republican speech there. The next day Maine went Democratic.

The primary purpose of President Roosevelt and the National Administration is best set forth in the President's own words. A very clear exposition of his broad policy is found in the President's message to Congress on the 8th of June, 1934, when he said: "Among our objectives I place the security of the men, women and children of the Nation first."

Improperly Distributed Light Cause of Eye Strain and Headache

Primitive man did virtually all his work indoors and the sun gave him between 1,000 and 10,000 foot-candles for daytime activities. Today most human work is done indoors and man still has the same optical equipment as his caveman forefathers. We are now trying to accustom that optical equipment to long hours of abnormally intense visual service under subnormal artificial lighting. These facts are brought out by the new "Science of Seeing" developed by Dr. Matthew Luckiesh, director of the General Electric Company's lighting research laboratories at Cleveland, Ohio.

Nature refuses to give us better eyes. Consequently, our only recourse is to adjust artificial lighting to nature's daylight conditions. It is impossible to adjust nature's eyes to subnormal lighting conditions.

Nature's plan was distant seeing under high light intensities from dawn to darkness with easy visual tasks. Man's modern plan is close vision with low light intensities, working from morning to midnight on abnormally severe and prolonged tasks.

Our abused eyes are slow to protest. But eye strain punishes us in-between with nervousness, fatigue and physical upset. If we continue to abuse our eyes, they punish us directly and we pay the price of defective vision. Today one out of every five grade school children is visually handicapped. This handicap is worse among college students and still worse among persons of middle age.

But science has found a way out for us by lightening the burden of the eyes with proper lighting. It has devised new inventions to measure the light under which we work and the proper amount of light for that work.

The Public Service Company of Northern Illinois is providing a means for measuring the light people use and the light they need. The Company invites the public to visit its stores to see the new Sight Meter and see for themselves under what light intensity they can read most easily. Visitors may also obtain "lighting tape measures." The lighting tape measure is an ingenious little device for checking lighting in the home.

HOW THE DEMOCRATIC ADMINISTRATION HAS HELPED YOU

1. The DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL ADMINISTRATION, under the leadership of President Roosevelt has put the farmer back on his feet. The price of corn is more than four times as high as it was in 1932. The price of wheat has more than doubled. The price of hogs is nearly twice as high.

Through the corn loan act the farmers of Illinois have had at least $17,000,000 more to spend on groceries, clothes, automobiles, machinery and other necessary commodities.

This has helped YOU. Because of the increase in farm income, business in every city, town and village in Illinois has increased. More people now have jobs. Wages are higher. Working conditions are better and YOU have more security than you had two years ago.

Through other Democratic administration projects YOUR security has been increased. Your bank account is now safe. If not your home, the home of one of your neighbors has been saved to him because of the home loan act. Your farm or the farm of one of your neighbors has been saved for him through the farm credit administration. It is easy for you to think of a dozen other things the government has done for your benefit.

These things have been done for YOU, and they have been done by a Democratic administration.

2. The DEMOCRATIC STATE ADMINISTRATION, under the leadership of Governor Henry Horner, has cut your tax bill. The taxes on real estate and personal property for State purposes have been eliminated. For the first time since Illinois became a State you are paying no State tax on your home or your farm. Look at your tax bill and you will realize that this one act has saved the real and personal property taxpayers approximately $35,000,000.

This same Democratic State administration has saved YOUR money by conducting the State government in an economical manner. In the year and a half it has been in office it has cut appropriations by more than $18,000,000.

The Democratic State administration has caused reductions in rates on gas and electricity which have saved the consumers more than $8,150,000. It has also given REAL protection to the insurance policy holders of the State.

These are only a few of the many things which have been done for your benefit.

These have all been done for YOU, and they have been done by a Democratic administration.

Frank M. Fulton,

Rep. Candidate

For Congress

Frank M. Fulton, Republican candidate for Congress, from the Third District, is a son of Henry D. Fulton, former State Representative. He comes from fighting stock and when elected may be depended upon to truly represent the District.

He is 55 years of age and has lived in the District since 1884. Educated in the public schools; a graduate of Englewood High School and Chicago Business College. Is engaged in the wholesale gasoline storage plant in Chicago. He resides at 317 West Marquette Road. He is a member of the South Shore, Olympia Fields and Beverly Country Clubs, and the Illinois Athletic Club. He is affiliated with various Masonic organizations and is a member of Medinah Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

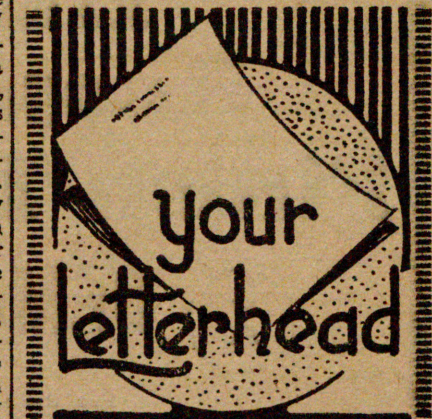

While he always has been deeply interested in civic affairs and given liberally of his time and money for the development of all worth while projects in the District, he has never held public office. It is, therefore, gratifying to find a man of his calibre, with large personal interests to look after, willing to forego these in interests and devote his time, energy and ability to the common cause, say his legion of friends.

Mr. Fulton is gifted with a most charming and gracious personality, which immediately attracts you to him. He is modest and unassuming, but in conversing with him you are quickly convinced of his honesty and sincerity of purpose, his rugged Americanism, and the fact that he is a keen student of business and political science.

He is primarily a business man and believes that sound, proven business methods should be applied to the conduct of governmental affairs. That the Congress should reassert its Constitutional prerogatives, that our currency may be stabilized and the budget balanced. He feels that a curb must be placed on the alarming growth of bureaucracy if our republican form of government is to be preserved. This concentration of authority in bureaus, which are usurping all the functions of the legislative and judicial branches of the government, menaces the safeguards of liberty and security embodied in the Constitution. That the state must and should be responsible to the people and not the people to the state.

Being a man of ability, determination and courage, there can be no doubt that he will make his influence felt in Congress, that he will labor unceasingly for the best interests of his constituents and prove himself worthy of their suffrage.

About Emergency

Relief Bonds

Just one issue - either (a) Approve bonds and spread payments over 20-year periods, by withholding a small percentage of gas tax allotted each year to state, county and municipal highway work, in proportion to the funds each county and municipality got for relief this year; which is fair to everybody; or,

(b) Do not approve bonds, and thus be compelled to pay next year an additional 63 cents per $100 assessed value on everything you own, real estate, automobile, truck, all personal property - on top of your regular 1934 taxes no matter where you live or whether your county and town got a dime for relief.

The amount diverted from the gas tax allotment in any one year would not total four and one-half millions at the peak for the entire State of Illinois, and this would be subdivided into $3,502,000 from the counties and $985,000 from the towns. After 1944, when the 1932 bonds are retired, the counties and municipalities will meet the annual requirements equally. Therefore, since the maximum diversion for these bonds in any one year would be four and a half million, there will remain at least $24,000,000 - less perhaps two millions which Chicago now apparently has for its schools - that will be available each year for the highways.

In any event, whatever may be one's objections in principle to gas tax diversions, it is a practical situation and not a theory that we have to meet. The practical facts are that the bonds will retire the notes on which 1934 relief funds were issued, and will save the State's credit. The equity behind these notes is the special tax of $38,000,000 amounting to 63 cents per $100 of assessed value, levied by the Legislature and collectible next year. Either the bonds must pass, or the tax must be collected, to save the credit of the State. The noteholder can go to court and force the collection of the tax. It is impossible to pay these notes from other State revenues. So avoid the heavy special tax by voting "Yes" for the bonds on November 6.

Brain Trusters Are Ruining Country
Republicans are Told

A packed house greeted the Republican speakers at (a monster Republican rally held Saturday night at the Joliet Chamber of Commerce under the auspices of the Will County central committee.

The speakers received a big hand and from the tone of the meeting it was indicative of a steadily mounting interest in the Republican issues of the campaign.

Attorney Wm. A. Murphy of Joliet was the chairman of the gathering and in his introductory remarks he pointed out that despite the fact the federal government has expended sixteen billion dollars more than the cost of the World War, during the past 16 months, there are more persons on relief now than ever before.

Congressman Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York was the chief speaker of the evening and declared that prosperity will not return to the United States so long as the "Brain Trust" continues its attempt to force state socialism and general impoverishment such as exists in Soviet Russia upon the nation. Congressman Fish is a bitter foe of Communism.

He further pointed out that while the Republican members of Congress supported the NRA and other alphabet organizations, they do so because they believed them to be emergency measures, not realizing that the Brain Trusters intended them to be a permanent part of the regimentation of the nation.

He scored the muddling and constantly changing policies and socialistic experiments of the Democratic administration and blamed them to be largely responsible for the increasing labor unrest throughout the United States. The artificial prices and high cost of living, particularly on food and the necessities of life under the NRA has caused a great hardship to all consumers and wage earners, he declared.

He lauded American labor by saying that the American Federation of Labor is to be commended for the precaution it is taking to oppose the influence of Communists to promote riots, sabotage and industrial unrest.

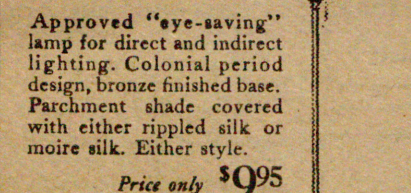

He showed how the principles of Jeffersonian Democrats, the rights and liberties of the individual under the constitution, state rights, opposition to centralization of power at Washington and interference with the affairs of the individual and private business have been kicked out of the window and scuttled by the Brain Trust.

Senator R. J. Barr characterized the Democratic party as one that has been running the country on the rocks every time they have been in power. He went back to the Grover Cleveland era and said the Democrats told the people they were working too hard and told the voters "out us in power and you want have to work so hard" and when they were placed in power the voters did not have to work at all and it took Wm. McKinley and his protective tariff to get the country off the rocks.

Then along came Woodrow Wilson and the Democrats said "Re-elect Wilson, he kept us out of war" and soon as he was re-elected he plunged us into the world war. And now, the senator continued, the "Brain Trusters" are running the country on the rocks again with their experiments and socialistic plans. The senator pointed out that a return to sound Republican policies and principles is the only way to save our country from hitting the rocks.

Avoid eye strain with proper light. Send today for our free lighting test of your home.

IN two out of three homes, say lighting experts, incorrect lighting threatens eyes. To protect eyes, 20 to 30 foot-candles of light should fall on the printed page. This should be properly diffused with no glare, no deep shadows, no contrasts to cause eyes to change focus frequently. Under such lighting eye tension is relieved. Your body relaxes. Your nerves relax, too.

Many homes lack correct lighting

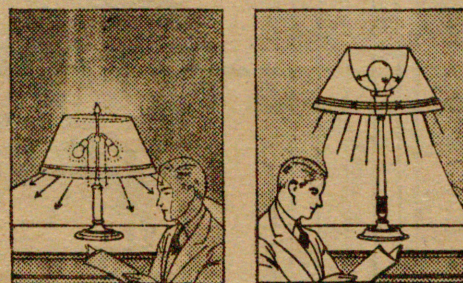

Most women would be only too glad to give their families the benefit of safe lighting; to protect the eyesight of their children. But they have no way of measuring the kind of light their lamps give. And so night after night eyes struggle with danger of permanent injury.

How to get it

In the last few years some wonderful discoveries have been made about proper lighting. Lighting engineers have found that just by changing the position of shades, by raising or lowering the height of bulbs, and by designing a special kind of "light reflecting" shade, these handicaps to eyesight are completely overcome. Your Public Service Store has a variety of these properly designed lamps for sale. They are beautiful as well as safe for eyes. Come down and see them and at the same time learn, from our better lighting display, simple and easy ways in which you can improve the lighting in your home. And get Free, a marvelous little device called "The Lighting Tape Measure," which enables you to tell quickly whether or not each lamp in your home is providing safe light. Act at once. Don't allow the eyes in your family to struggle unaided another night.

Which is YOUR lamp?

Lamp 1. Bulbs too low, sides of shade too sloping. Result—glare, deep shadows, eyestrain. Lamp 2. Bulbs at right height, shade of correct design. Result—restful light, precious eyesight protected. FREE at your Public Service Store, "Lighting Tape Measure" to test your lamps. Get it today.

RUFFLE EFFECTS SET OFF FROCK

PATTERN 9677

If you choose your frocks with an eye to flattery you'll be sure to like the feminine details of this one. The front bodice panel brings to mind a "tucker," in the way it is stitched on top of the skirt. Ruffles outline the panels front and back, and the sleeves in ruffle effect are gracefully flared in keeping with the mood. A frock that is really slenderizing and a gem for those many informal affairs of the season. It is lovely fashioned of a dainty voile, dimity, lawn or swiss, or one of the gay, new silk prints.

Pattern 9677 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 39 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER AND SIZE.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington. — Whatever may be gleaned from recent developments in Washington, it can be stated with certainty that President Roosevelt has now set his mind definitely to continue the National Recovery administration as a governmental unit. It may well be that the organization will be changed as to form; it may be possible that the name will be revised and that there may be revision of methods. But there can be no equivocation about the fact that Mr. Roosevelt intends to maintain NRA and that he has acted at this time to give notice of his decision in advance of the convening of congress.

NRA Will Continue

Observers here have taken note of the unusual emphasis placed upon the President's part in NRA reorganization plans. They think this was done at the behest of the Chief Executive with the thought in mind that it would serve as a reassurance to hundreds of thousands of people throughout the country. I believe there can be no doubt that a good many people, some influential, some just the mine-run, have questioned the flying qualities of the Blue Eagle. Their dissatisfaction and distrust has been shown in many ways and thus it appears logical that Mr. Roosevelt would seek to allay their fears.

Under the new set-up of NRA, the President has taken active leadership. Of course, he has been the leader heretofore, but there has always been the disposition on his part to allow the former administrator, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, to guide his own ship. Despite the fact that Mr. Johnson was given a free hand, it was easy for Mr. Roosevelt to take control because, after all, he is President of the United States.

By dividing management of NRA among the heads of three boards, it is generally believed that the President has made it easier for himself to assert his influence and his ideas more directly than has hitherto been the case. This is particularly true when the personality of the former administrator is considered although the President had only one man with whom to deal under that circumstance.

Politically minded people in Washington seem to be wondering, however, what the effect will be on Mr. Roosevelt. Suggestions have been heard that by taking a direct hand in NRA Mr. Roosevelt has put himself "out front" where, some seem to think he may be the target for some of the "rotten eggs" about which the bombastic General Johnson spoke so frequently. The retiring administrator said frequently he did not mind being the target, but many times Mr. Roosevelt has taken occasion to fight back at his critics by calling them Tories, unawakened Rip Van Winkles, and other such descriptive terms.

Opposition Active

It is yet too early for a general reaction to be evident among conservative business men on the President's NRA reorganization program. Those who have given voice to their feelings thus far, however, have indicated that the right wing group in the country are finding small unction from the new program. Indeed, the undercurrent of information which we get in Washington is to the effect that there are more secret meetings and definite moves among business interests to ward off any left wing swing by the administration than there has been at any time since Mr. Roosevelt took office.

The President's recent radio speech to the country was generally understood as a conciliatory move on his part and it seems not to take a stretch of the imagination to link that speech and NRA reorganization with these various movements against the overhanging threats of such liberals as Donald Richberg, former Chicago labor lawyer, who is certainly the most influential man in the new NRA set-up.

Everywhere I go, I find that business interests are accepting the reorganization of NRA as notice of its continuation and it may be possible that one result of this interpretation of the President's act is the growing opposition movement mentioned above. Business generally is mindful that the matter of continuing NRA must be decided by congress. They recognize that the present recovery act expires next June and that the President will lay before congress a comprehensive program early in January after congress returns. Their efforts in opposition, therefore, naturally will be directed to the congress in an effort to accomplish some of the changes in the law which they believe advisable to permit free and untrammelled commerce and industry.

With regard to the President's determination to continue NRA it needs to be pointed out only that if he had wanted to scrap that unit of his recovery set-up, the retirement of General Johnson afforded an excellent opportunity. It was then that he could have allowed the organization to disintegrate and could have transferred to various agencies of the government that are permanent in character such functions as he desired should continue. But he did not do that. He acted with dispatch. This is best shown by the chronology of events. It appears that the President made up his mind over one week-end. He received General Johnson's resignation on a Monday and announced it on a Tuesday. His return to Washington on Wednesday was followed immediately by conferences with Mr. Richberg and a quick announcement of the new program. It is evident, therefore, that when the President decided something had to be done, he moved at once to get rid of General Johnson and to start the new machinery through orders issued to Mr. Richberg.

Formulation of industrial policies henceforth are regarded as likely to be more on the basis of trial and error than heretofore has been the case.

Banking and other financial interests of the country are apparently quite disturbed over the trend toward easier bank examinations.

Financiers Disturbed

Mr. Roosevelt lately has told the treasury that the bank examiners were too hardboiled in going over loans held in portfolios of banks and that he was anxious to see a more uniform system developed than the examining methods long in use.

The fear seems to be that the bank examiners will relax too far in granting approval for loans outstanding. Heretofore, banks have had to toe the mark and any questionable papers or any loan that gave evidence of not being liquidated in accordance with its terms was promptly called to the attention of the bank management with instructions to make corrective adjustments on the books. If, as some financial authorities expect, bank examiners become too lenient it is suggested in many quarters that the banks again may find themselves with paper upon which they cannot realize just as occurred at the beginning of this depression. It was bad loans that forced the closing of many banks.

Then, too, many observers are finding it difficult to reconcile the President's attitude with the frequent criticisms he has made of banking practices heretofore employed. I am reminded also of the stinging rebukes that have come from the senate committee on banking and currency after its investigation of the banking structure. Time after time that committee, which proceeded with its investigation with a blessing from the White House, has attacked banks and bankers because of bad loans and worse judgment in dealing with the borrowers. The question has been asked several times lately whether banks are going to be willing to make loans that are in some respects a gamble even under the President's urge if, later, they will be subjected to attacks in the halls of congress.

On the bank loans the President is convinced that bank examiners have been throwing out a lot of loans that are Examiners Too Stringent perfectly good. They have been forcing the banks to charge off this paper as a loss. In other words, Mr. Roosevelt believes that under the old rules of examination a too stringent attitude was adopted by the administrative authorities in the treasury and the bank examiners carried out those rules literally.

In the background, it is to be remembered, however, there is the federal deposit insurance corporation. This agency guarantees that the depositors will be repaid in full up to a limit of $5,000 on each account. It would seem to be that the existence of this insurance corporation ought to fend off any particular fear. But bankers know and a good many of the political and administrative leaders recognize that the corporation could not withstand wholesale bank failures. It draws its funds from assessment of member banks and, therefore, when its present reserves are exhausted banks must dig up more. Following this line of reasoning, one cannot help arriving at the conclusion that a series of bank failures, resulting from bad loans, would throw more of a burden upon the good banks than they can carry. Thus it is made to appear that a high percentage of bankers in the country after all are going to continue to exercise their judgment on the type of loans they make and will not be influenced materially by administration wishes. Some, of course, will extend credit with abandon, and it is this group of bankers who eventually will witness the deposit insurance corporation paying off their depositors.

Consumers must look to a change in their diet as regards some items of food during the coming winter, according to a statement from the Department of Agriculture. Through the bureau of agricultural economics the department said that it expected some increases in prices between now and the end of the year but that the climb in price levels likely would be more gradual and not so large as has occurred in the last three months. This fact, it appeared, was traceable to the shortage of some kinds of food resulting from the drought in the central states and a superabundance of some other kinds produced in the eastern half and far western sections of the United States.

The department suggested that the full effect of the drought on retail food prices will not be felt until next spring. At that time, supplies of meats, dairy products and poultry products will have been reduced.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How to Pray.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Prayer Jesus Taught His Disciples.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Learning How to Pray.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Prayer as Fellowship With God.

I. False Prayer (vv. 5, 7, 8).

1. Praying to be seen and heard of men (v. 5). To go through the act of praying with such an object is to play the hypocrite. In praying, the soul is dealing with God; therefore, to engage in it to attract men's attention is blasphemy. Many of the prayers uttered in the public sanctuary are false, for there is more consideration given to what the people think than to what God thinks. Men who thus pray get a reward, but not from God.

2. Using vain repetitions (vv. 7, 8).

This does not mean that we should ask but once for the thing desired, for we have examples of Christ and Paul praying three times for the same thing (Matt. 26:39-46; 2 Cor. 12:7, 8), but rather it means the use of meaningless repetitions, their reiterations becoming empty sounds. To thus pray is heathenish. The heathen nations in their worship of idols engage in senseless babble, an example of which we see in the priests of Baal on Mount Carmel (1 Kings 18:26).

II. True Prayer (v. 6).

Since true prayer is a definite transaction of the soul with God, the communion of the human personality with the divine personality, we should have a real desire for fellowship with God and then go to meet him in secret.

Life for its fullest development needs both solitude and companionship. Solitude alone makes one morose, while constant companionship makes one shallow. God who made us knew what our natures required, therefore he commands both public and private prayer (Heb. 10:25; Matt. 6:6). We should have our closet prayers, when all the world, its cares and pleasures, is shut out, and we are shut in with God. We should also meet with God's children to pray.

III. A Model Prayer (vv. 9-15).

This was given in response to the disciples' request that the Lord would teach them to pray (Luke 11:1). It is not, therefore, strictly the Lord's prayer, but the model prayer for the disciples. It involves:

1. A right relationship (v. 9). One must be in such relationship as to be able to say "Our Father." Only those who have become children of God by faith in Jesus Christ (Gal. 3:26) can pray aright.

2. A right attitude (vv. 9, 10). "Hallowed be thy name." When one realizes that he has been delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of his dear Son (Col. 1:13) by being made a child of God, he cannot help pouring out his soul in gratitude and praise, intensely longing for the kingdom—that is, the righteous rule of Christ on the earth.

3. A right spirit (vv. 11-13).

a. That of trust which looks to God for the supply of daily bread. We are dependent upon him for our daily food. With all man's boasted progress, he cannot make a harvest.

b. That of love which results in forgiveness of others. God will not listen to the prayers of the one who has an unforgiving spirit.

c. That of holiness which moves one to pray not to be led into temptation. Such a one longs to be delivered from the Evil One.

IV. Paul's Prayer for the Ephesians (Eph. 3:14-21).

1. To whom made (vv. 14, 15). It was to the Father of the Lord Jesus Christ.

2. For what he prayed (vv. 16-19).

a. For the strengthening of the inner man by the Holy Spirit (v. 16).

b. For Christ's indwelling (v. 17). The human personality needs the quickening of the Spirit in order that it might be a fit place for Christ to dwell.

c. That they might be rooted and grounded in love (v. 17). The only way that real love can flow from the human heart is through Christ's indwelling.

d. The apprehension of Christ's love (vv. 18, 19). This love, in its depth, breadth, width, and height, transcends human understanding.

3. The triumphant assurance that this will be realized (vv. 20, 21). This realization, which is beyond human ability to even think, is to be accomplished by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit.

What We Live For

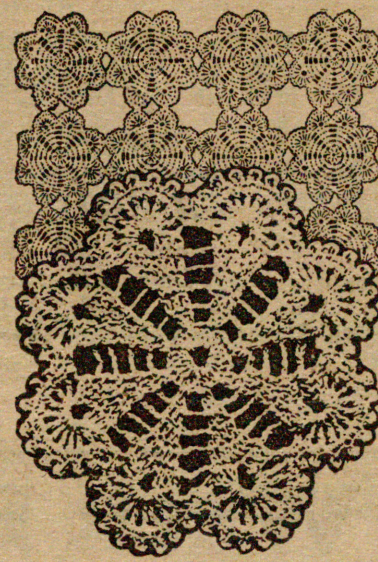

We may say what we will, and profess what we will, that which we live for determines whose we are and what we are. "For me to live is Christ," cried St. Paul. As other men live for gain or pleasure, the Christian is meant to be a man who lives for Christ.

Trouble Within

Today I have got out of all trouble or rather I have cast out all trouble, for it was not outside, but within and in my opinions.—Marcus Aurelius.

Crochet Motif for Bedspread

By Grandmother Clark

A bedspread in crochet is a work of art, attracts attention and frequently becomes an heirloom. A spread crocheted in one piece becomes cumbersome as the work progresses. How much simpler to crochet one motif at a time and then assemble the motifs to complete spread. Watch your work grow when it can be taken along with you to social gatherings.

The above illustration represents the "Snow Flake" motif and how it shows up when put together. This motif when made of carpet warp measures six inches. Thirty-two motifs can be made from one pound of warp. This is only one of the 29 motifs shown in our book No. 27 on motif bedspreads. These motifs can also be used to make match sets for bedroom: curtains, pillows, chair-backs, scarfs, etc.

Write our crochet department enclosing 15c for this book No. 27, illustrated, with instructions, or send 25c and receive also book No. 26, with 72 edgings and insertions in crochet for all purposes.

Climbing Pike's Peak

At the time of the discovery, Zebulon Pike expressed the positive opinion that the Colorado peak named in his honor was so high that it never would be climbed. Automobiles now race to its summit over a perfect speedway.

Got Her Lock of Hair, but Not Paderewski's

Paderewski has, like many another notability, undergone the ordeal of complying with autograph hunters' demands for signatures. But the famous pianist, if we may judge by what is said to have happened on one occasion, draws the line at the distribution of mementoes in the shape of samples of his beautiful hair, albeit gifted by nature with a profusion of that article.

It was when he was visiting America that a well-known society woman had the audacity to hand through the window of his private car a gushing epistle, winding up with the request for "a lock of hair." It is alleged that Paderewski's secretary replied as follows: "You fail to specify whose hair you desire. M. Paderewski, therefore, in order to avoid disappointment, has secured for you some fine specimens from his manager, secretary, valet, waiter two cooks, and the cat."

KELP

Recently scientists have made startling discoveries of a sea treasure more important to life and happiness than that contained in the rusty, iron bound chests occasionally found in sunken ships.

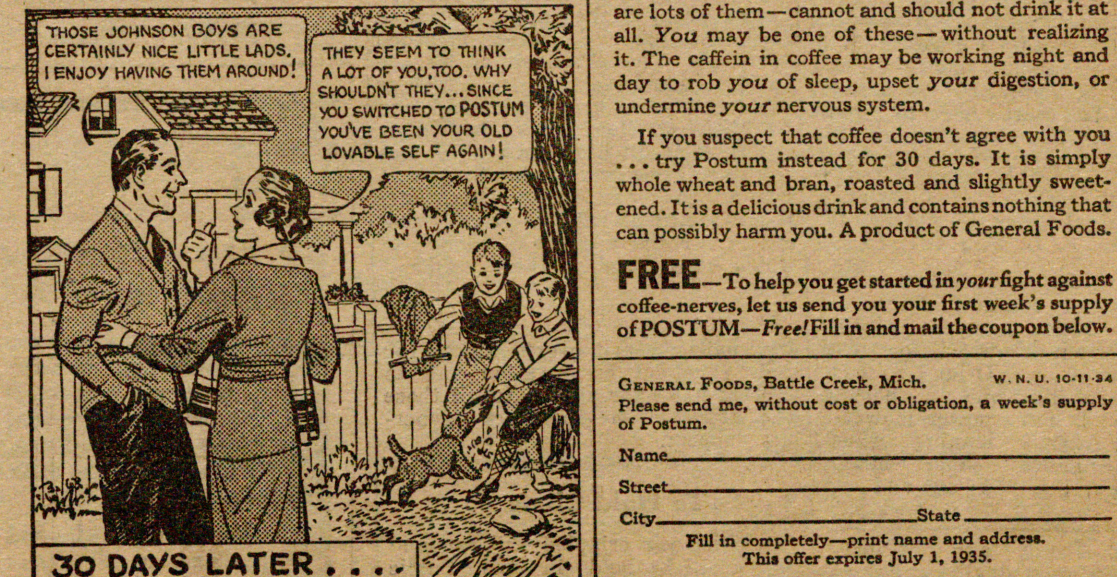

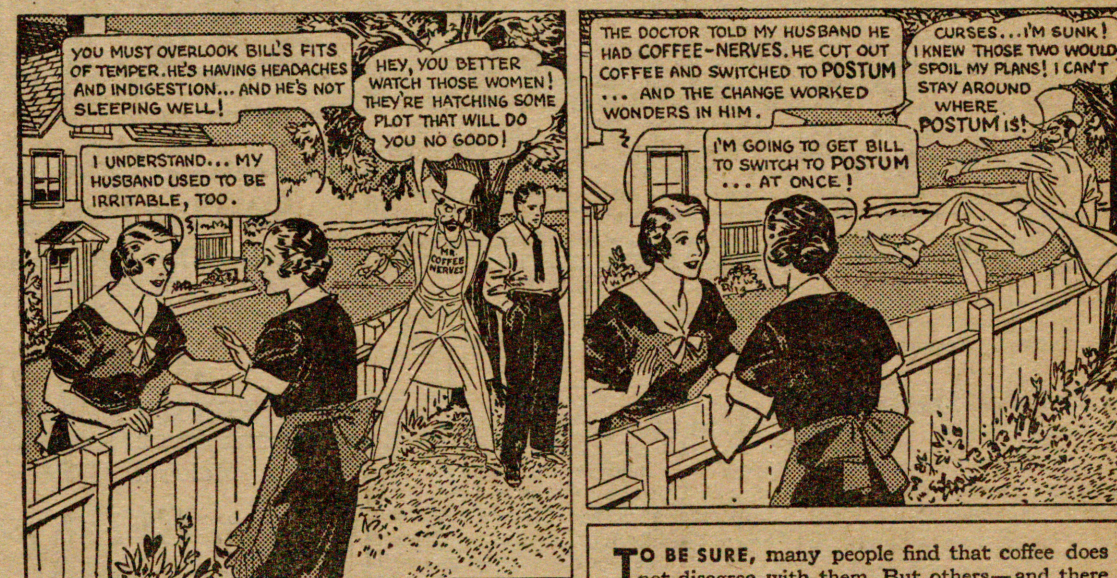

In the coastal waters of the Pacific Ocean off California there is often found growing a huge sea plant with stems often measuring 90 feet or more in length, known as kelp. In these leaves are found such minerals as iron, copper, calcium, phosphorus, iodine, manganese and other elements once available in abundance in the soil but have been washed to the sea by the rains of the ages. These helpful elements are all found in the leaf of the kelp, the basis of Kelp-a-Malt.—Adv.

Bird Instinct Tested

To test the homing instinct of birds, the Ornithological Institute of Essen, Prussia, released 350 birds in distant towns and most of the flyers returned to Essen.

Mr. COFFEE-NERVES finds himself out of a job

TO BE SURE, many people find that coffee does not disagree with them. But others—and there are lots of them—cannot and should not drink it at all. You may be one of these—without realizing it. The caffeine in coffee may be working night and day to rob you of sleep, upset your digestion, or undermine your nervous system.

If you suspect that coffee doesn't agree with you... try Postum instead for 30 days. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. It is a delicious drink and contains nothing that can possibly harm you. A product of General Foods.
